The hashCode() given in the question is a legal. All the inputs are sent to a single index value '17'. It is not an efficient way of generating hashcode. If we do use this then there will be N-1 collisions in the table (where N is the number of inputs). This will lead to increase time complexity.